Dear Friends,

This past week included two powerful reminders of how horrific genocide can be. On Saturday, I was able to come a bit closer to understanding the pain and suffering and the utter anguish of those who survived the Rwandan genocide. I was privileged to listen to several personal testimonies during a four hour memorial service for those whose family members were victims of this event that began thirty two years ago.

A few days earlier, Bishop David Jones and I shared time with Bishop Andudu Elnail as he recounted the horrors that continue to be inflicted upon the innocent people of the Diocese of Kadugli. (See a recent letter from Bishop Andudu here.) His people continue to experience unmitigated warfare at the hands of the Khartoum government. The bishop is interrupting his training in peace education at Eastern Mennonite University to return home. Our prayers go with him as he tries to bring solace to a people whose stories someday might equal the wrenching accounts that I heard at the Rwandan memorial service. We have memorial services to recall the suffering of a previous time, hoping that the present and future will not include the atrocities that made a memorial service necessary.

As we are consumed by the events of the past two and a half years in South Sudan, there is a danger that the relentless warfare that has persisted for years against the people of the Nuba Mountains will slip into the background of our memories just as it has seemingly slipped from the attention of the media. But forgetfulness by outsiders does not mitigate the pain of those to whom Bishop Andudu ministers.

At a recent board meeting, AFRECS committed funds to help the people of the diocese of Kadugli. Our modest grant is far, far short of what is needed. I would ask that as you pray for an end to the suffering of these people, including the killing of innocent children, you think of providing financial support to both feeding those on the brink of starvation and underwriting a struggling training center for pastors as AFRECS is doing. AFRECS will gladly receive your donations designated for the Diocese of Kadugli and transmit them immediately to the account that we maintain to assist Bishop Andudu and his people.

We know that the funds, however generous we might strive for them to be, are insufficient, given the enormous need before us. Thus our advocacy continues with those whom we believe have a mandate for responding to the plight of the people of the Nuba Mountains.

Let our prayers continue as fervently as possible. Let our compassion extend to giving tangible evidence that we deeply care.

Faithfully,
Richard

South Sudan and the Region

Bishop Samuel Peni (see above Conference Information, #2 under Distinguished Guest Speakers and workshop leaders) recently traveled to Nairobi to participate in a training session conducted by Coalition for Peace in Africa \(COPA\) that focused on gender and violence prevention in post conflict transitions. Bishop Peni's participation in this training was co-sponsored by: The Episcopal Church Office of Global Partnerships; American Friends of the Episcopal Church in the Sudans; and the Diocese of Iowa.

This recent Washington Post article: 'Biggest story you missed: The other refugee crises' written by Tiffany Harness, an editor on the foreign desk, details the movement of refugees in the region of sub-Saharan Africa. Focusing on South Sudan, she writes: "More than 2.4 million South Sudanese have been displaced within the country, and nearly 1 million more have fled to nearby countries, including Ethiopia, Uganda, Sudan and Kenya, according to the U.N. refugee agency. The situation is so tumultuous that nearly 100,000 South Sudanese have made their way to Darfur, a region in neighboring Sudan and itself the scene of more than 10 years of warfare that has left hundreds of thousands of people dead..."

KBC TV: Kenya to close Dadaab, Kakuma refugee camps. A brief excerpt from this recent article follows:

"Last year, the government backtracked on plans to close down Dadaab, the world's largest refugee camp, after intense pressure from the international community. The government is seeking international assistance noting that the action to close the camps will definitely spark humanitarian consequences. 'The Government of Kenya acknowledges that this decision will have adverse effects on the lives of refugees and therefore the international community must collectively take responsibility on humanitarian needs that will arise out of this action' said the Principal Secretary."

The Coalition of Advocates for South Sudan \(CASS\), on behalf of approximately 50 organizations and individuals advocating for the people of South Sudan, will submit the following letter to H.E. President Salva Kiir; H.E. First Vice President Riek Machar; and H.E. Vice President James Wani Igga of the Republic of South Sudan.

RE: The Immediate Delivery of Humanitarian Aid to Address the Effects of Famine

Your Excellencies,

We, the undersigned organizations, scholars and prominent individuals, are alarmed by the drastic humanitarian situation in South Sudan, with the Famine Early Warning Systems Network reporting increasing death rates and a deepening humanitarian catastrophe. The World Food Program just issued a report estimating that 5.3 million South Sudanese face severe food insecurity, a 15 percent increase from last year, and is also reaching into non-conflict zone areas. While the formation of the Transitional Government of National Unity is an important step, its first actions must be to end the fighting that continues and to provide immediate unimpeded humanitarian access throughout the country to alleviate the suffering of the South Sudanese people.

We urge the Transitional Government of National Unity to ensure immediate authorization for humanitarian agencies to move throughout the country... The international community must do its part, but you must also take serious and sustained action to address these issues. Otherwise, the people of South Sudan will continue to suffer.

Sudan

*****

ACT for Sudan, an alliance of over 60 grassroots, community, and faith-based organizations across the United States, is asking supporters to take action: "120 Members of Congress sent a letter to President Obama urging him to make Sudan a priority in his remaining months in office in order to stop the long running government sponsored mass atrocities and genocide in Sudan. Since that letter was drafted, attacks on civilians have continued in Sudan, including the recent massacre of children in Heiban in the Nuba Mountains of Sudan. That's why it is so important that President Obama act." See this link for information about how to be in touch with President Obama and Ambassador Power.
